Course Code: DPH 102

Paper Name: Contemporary Research Areas in Political Science

Objectives: The students will understand about the debates on Environmentalism and Civil Society. They will come to know the discourses on gender issues and disability rights in the global scenario. They will understand about environment, disarmament and national security from a procedural and substantive perspective. They will know the concept of media and politics.

Outcome: With the advent of 21st century, human beings have achieved a lot in each and every sphere of human life in terms of technological advancements and economic growth which have made their life far better than it was earlier. But with all these achievements human society is facing many challenges as well, which needs our attention. Similarly there are many issues arising in every dimension of individual life which has become a concern for all of us. Therefore, this course focuses on such contemporary political issues not only in the national perspective but also in the global perspective. This can help the students to have an idea about the major issues which can develop a reasoned outlook amongst the students regarding these issues.
